

Children's Rights convention

about the project

Realizing the rights of children and young people is a standard of the educational system.

The Students' Rights Law is part of the professional and humane foundation of school culture.

The concept of the school as an educational home directs us toward a goal of respect for every girl and boy, as well as every adult. A corollary of possessing rights, however, is that both children and adults are responsible for the realization of the rights of others. We must help each student develop strong senses of self-awareness and self-worth.

Children, young people and adults must know what their rights are, why they are important and how they can be realized.
Rights cannot be attained without a deep commitment to building a warm society that encourages giving.

I welcome the initiative of The Camera Obscura School of Art, which joined us to create with you animated films dealing with the rights of every child, in every place, at every time.

Warmest regards,
Ronit Tirosh