Communicating In Moodle

A steady stream of communication is an essential component in online learning environments. There are a few common tools available for communication in Moodle.

- Forum Module

The forum module allows communication in Moodle between students and teachers. There are 5 forum types, each for a different purpose and for a different setting.

- Single Simple Discussion

In this format, a single topic discussion is developed on one page. This is useful for short, focused discussions, as it is only available within one group, not throughout separate groups.

- Standard Forum For General Use

This type of forum is open, so anyone can make posts, or start new topics at any time. For general forums, this is the recommended format.

- Each Person Posts One Discussion

This is a useful format if you'd like each student to start a weekly discussion, for example. Even though each student can only post one new discussion topic, everyone can reply to them.

- Q&A Forum

Instead of an open discussion, here participants post questions as the initial discussion starter. Students can post their answers, and they will not be able to see other responses until they have done so.

- Standard Forum

Posts in this type of forum are displayed in a blog-like format.
