Hello, Listeners. I'm Jeff Bond, and you are listening to Unusual Places to Visit. With us is Rosie Trent. She is a tour guide. She will tell us about an unusual place that tourists can visit in the USA. Hello, Rosie.

Hello, Jeff.

So, Rosie, where do you take tourists to in the USA?

Well, most tourists to the USA enjoy seeing famous places like New York City or Disney World. But I don't take them there – I take them to places that are unusual and are NOT famous.

Can you give us an example?

Sure. For example, I like to take people to an unusual bookstore. This bookstore is far from any of the big cities, and from all the famous places. It takes about three hours to get there from New York. The bookstore is on a large farm. Its name is Books on the Farm.

A bookstore on a farm? That IS unusual. Who opened it there?

This store belongs to a man called Henry Mason. He used to live in New York, and had a bookstore there. A few years ago, he decided to live outside the city, but he wanted to keep his bookstore. So he found a beautiful building on a farm, and moved his bookstore there. The building is 200 years old, and it is very large.

And why do people travel so far to visit this bookstore?

Because it's like traveling to the past. In this bookstore there are books, maps and pictures that are more than 150 years old. Just like in a museum, most things in this store are rare and valuable. But the store is also very different from a museum: in the store, you can pick up and touch everything you see.

And can anyone buy these rare things?

Yes, of course. The bookstore recently sold one very old book for over 100,000 dollars. But visitors can also buy books that are not rare. And even when they don't buy anything, they like to look at all the books and maps. They ALWAYS find things that interest them.

Three hours is a long ride just for a bookstore, even if it is unusual. Is there anything else for tourists to do in the area?

Oh yes! There are beautiful gardens near the bookstore, and they are open to visitors all year. There are also several artists living in the area. You can visit them in their homes and buy their pictures. In addition, there are many good restaurants. Tourists enjoy all these things very much. I know this because most of them told me that they want to come back again.

That DOES sound good. Well, thank you for coming, Rosie. And goodbye, everybody.
