Hello listeners and welcome to my podcast. My name is Dr. Green. I am a school psychologist. I work at the high school in my neighborhood, and once a week I give this podcast so that I can help students solve their problems. Today I am going to try to help Danny with his problem.

This is what Danny wrote.

"Dear Dr. Green, last month, my family and I moved to a new house in a different city. I did not want to leave my home and my friends, but my father needed to find a new job, so we had to move. My problem is that the summer holiday will end soon and I will have to start studying at a new high school. All the students in my class probably know each other. I will not have any friends, and I will feel very lonely and sad. I am very worried. What should I do?"

Thank you, Danny, for sharing your problem. It is normal to feel alone when you do not know anyone and everything is new. Here are a few tips that will help you.

My first tip is to smile! Try to look happy, even if you don't feel happy. When you smile at people and look happy, they will think you are friendly.

Another tip is to tell the teacher that you are new and ask him or her to help you. For example, your teacher can tell you if there is another new student in class. Your teacher can even let you sit together. Then you will make friends with someone who knows how you feel.

Danny, I hope these tips will help you. Dear listeners, I am sure that many of you have had the same problem. Please write me and tell me how you solved it. I will read some of your tips on one of our next podcasts so that everyone can learn from them.

This is all for today, dear listeners.

Bye for now
