Should Drivers Stop Using a Cell Phone While Driving?

by Simon Kerman

- Everyone knows that driving with only one hand on the steering-wheel is dangerous because the driver doesn't have enough control over the car. For that reason, many countries have made it illegal for drivers to use a cell phone that they hold in their hand. However, Dr. Susan Parker, a researcher on driving safety, claims that this is not enough. She says it is dangerous to use even a hands-free phone – one that allows drivers to keep both hands on the wheel. In fact, statistics show that drivers who use a cell phone are four times more likely to have an accident than other drivers. Dr. Parker explains that when you drive and talk on the phone, your mind is distracted and you don't pay attention to the road.
- 10 Dr. Parker used a driving simulator* to study the effects of cell phone conversations on drivers. Half of the participants talked on a cell phone, and the other half talked to a passenger in the car. To find out how carefully they drove, the two groups were asked to perform some tasks, like reaching a certain address or driving through busy streets. The researchers also checked how fast drivers reacted to problems on the road.
- 15 When Dr. Parker compared the results of both groups, she found that talking on a cell phone is more distracting than talking to someone in the car. This was true for both a hands-free phone and a hand-held phone. "When you talk to someone sitting next to you, you drive more safely than when you talk to someone on a cell phone," says Dr. Parker.
- 20 Dr. Parker also checked how talking on the phone affected drivers' reactions. She found out that drivers who talked on the phone looked straight ahead without checking the mirrors. This caused them to be less aware of what was happening around them and to react slowly to problems on the road.
- Dr. Parker concludes that drivers should stop using a cell phone while driving. "It's not easy to change driving habits, but I'm optimistic," she said. "We managed to convince drivers to use seatbelts, and I'm sure we can convince them to change this habit as well."
