The National Hat Museum, Portland, USA

Review* written yesterday

There are many famous museums to see in Portland, but I like visiting places that are not well known. I didn't enjoy all of the displays but this small museum was better than I expected. I even bought a funny hat in the gift shop. Don't bring young children to the museum because there's nothing for them to do.

Dan (Portland, USA)

Review written 4 weeks ago

I love the history of fashion, so I love this place! There are hats from all over the world and some of them are hundreds of years old. The display of the hats that belonged to movie stars is amazing!

Kate (London, England)

Review written one year ago

It's boring and expensive. The museum is really small and it only takes an hour to visit it. I have no idea why my friends liked this place. Go and visit only if you have nothing else to do.

المهمة رقم 5

Read the following text and answer the questions that follow.

Use your plate – then eat it!

Many of us often use plastic cups and plates for picnics and parties. Then we throw them in the garbage. But plastic is not good for the environment, because it can take more than 500 years to decompose*.

That's why people began to look for ways to make cups and plates that are edible – that means that you can actually eat them. And if you don't want to eat your cups and plates, that's okay too. You can throw them away and they will decompose very quickly.

One of the first people to invent edible cups and plates was Richard Williams. In 1998 he started a company in New Zealand called Potatopak. Potatopak makes cups and plates out of potatoes. They come in many different colors, are stronger than those made out of plastic and can be used for hot or cold food and drinks. You can eat them, but they do not taste very good. Only animals, like cows, actually enjoy eating them.

In 2004, in Poland, Jerzy Wysocki made edible cups and plates from wheat. Wheat is brown, and all the cups and plates are this color, but you can buy them in many different shapes and sizes. At present the cups can only be used with cold drinks.

Even though edible cups and plates are sold in some shops, they are more expensive than plastic ones. However, if we care about the environment, we should choose to use them instead of plastic ones whenever we have parties or picnics.
